During the project, young Roma people were trained in basic journalism skills, writing editorials, and setting up and managing communication tools available on the web, in order to publish an on-line publication called “Let the Roma Youth Be Heard”.

The electronic magazine can be found at www.romazine.eu and its content focuses on the conditions of the Roma people and it has been disseminated through several tools such as websites, social networks and the like.

In the final stage of the project, several articles and films have been produced in the partnership with Open Society Foundation (OSF). The focus of the written and recorded material at the end of "Let the Roma Youth Be Heard" has been on the Roma communities in Croatia, Czech Republic and Kosovo*.
