Three academics from Cairo University, and three from other Egyptian academic institutions developed Reporting Diversity courses, with the support of the Media Diversity Institute, which they now teach at their universities to journalism students. They were mentored in the development of the courses, by Naomi Sakr and Rasha Abdullah, two prominent academics from the UK and Egypt respectively, during 2009. The mentoring programme was organised by the Media Diversity Institute, with the support of the UK Embassy in Cairo. For more info contact: doaa.abdelaal@media-diversity.org
